STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

The right to freedom of religion guaranteed under the Constitution of India is not absolute but is subject to public order, morality, health and to other provisions of Part III of the Constitution relating to the fundamental rights of citizens. The Supreme Court of India has in many cases held that the freedom of religion is subject to reasonable restrictions and right to propagate under article 25 of the Constitution does not include the right to forcibly convert another person.

2. Instances of religious conversions which are forceful, involuntary or caused by influencing free consent of the citizens have been increasing and are being carried out in organized manner by various institutions. Many instances of mass conversion have come to light where gullible persons have been forcefully converted from one religion to another by offering any gift, gratification, easy money or material benefit either in cash or kind, employment, free education in school or college run by any religious body or institution, promise to marry, better lifestyle, divine healing, etc. These instances are causing disturbance to public order in the State and are affecting social harmony.

Individuals or families are susceptible to unlawful conversions due to their social and economic vulnerability in the society. Such vulnerable sections of the society need protection from the State. The existing laws are not sufficient to tackle various issues arising out of such religious conversion.

3. The State of Maharashtra has no law to regulate such religious conversions. Various States such as Orissa, Madhya Pradesh, Uttar Pradesh, Gujarat, Arunachal Pradesh, Himachal Pradesh, Karnataka, Uttarakhand, Tamil Nadu, etc., have already enacted the Freedom of Religion Acts for prohibition of such forceful and unlawful conversions from one religion to another.

The Government of Maharashtra has, therefore, constituted a special committee consisting of the Director General of Police and officers of the concerned Departments of Government to study legal issues relating to religious conversion. The said committee has, after due deliberations and consideration of various similar laws in other States, recommended enacting the Maharashtra Freedom of Religion Act for the State of Maharashtra.

Therefore, the Government of Maharashtra considers it expedient to enact a law to protect the right of freedom of religion and to prohibit unlawful conversion.

4. The salient features of the proposed law are as follows:—

(a) to prohibit conversion made by use or practice of allurement, misrepresentation, force, undue influence, coercion or by any other fraudulent means, etc.;

(b) to provide the procedure for conversion which includes declaration of intention of conversion by giving prior notice to the Competent Authority;

(c) to provide for declaration by the converted person and the person and institute which organize such conversion, to the Competent Authority after conversion;

(d) to provide for offences and punishment for violating the provisions of the proposed law;

(e) to provide for investigation of unlawful conversion by an officer not below the rank of Sub-Inspector of Police;

(i) to provide that offences under the law shall be cognizable and non-bailable;

(g) to provide for rehabilitation support by the State Government to victims of unlawful conversion and maintenance and custody of children.

5. The Bill seeks to achieve the above objectives.

Mumbai,
Dated the 12th March, 2026.

DEVENDRA FADNAVIS,
Chief Minister.

2. The above-mentioned proposals for delegation of legislative powers are of normal character.

FINANCIAL MEMORANDUM

Sub-clause (2) of clause 16 of the Bill provides for rehabilitation support to the victim of unlawful conversion as may be prescribed.

The Bill on its enactment as an Act of the State Legislature would involve recurring expenditure from the Consolidated Fund of the State towards the rehabilitation support for the victims of unlawful conversion. However, it is not possible at this stage to give an estimate of actual recurring expenditure that may have to be incurred in this behalf.
