Assembly Elections 2013 - Karnataka

The elections to the 14th Legislative Assembly for Karnataka is set to take place on the 5th of May 2013. The term of the current Karnataka Legislative Assembly commenced in May 2008, during which it held a total of 154 sittings.

Here, we take a look at the electoral trends in Karnataka over the past 24 years and some indicators of the functioning of the current Assembly.

The BJP has steadily increased its share of seats in the last four elections

Party wise performance in Assembly Elections

- The Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) has steadily won more seats in the Karnataka Assembly since 1994. In the current Assembly, 110 of the 224 seats are held by the party.
- In 1989, the Indian National Congress (INC) had a comprehensive majority with 178 seats (79 per cent of seats)
- In 1994, the Janata Dal (JD) emerged as the largest party with 115 seats. The INC was the third largest party with 34 seats.
- The BJP registered major gains in 2004, improving their tally of 44 seats in 1999 to 79 seats. The 2008 elections saw the largest victory for the party with 110 seats.

But the INC retained the largest vote share, except in 1994
